BRITAIN BACKS UP FRANCE

Favors Ample Guarantees for Safety Against Germany; Wilson Confined to Bed

Paris, April 4.—Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain, in a statement printed in the Petit Parisien today, declared that reports of dissension between the peace conferences of France and England were untrue. He said there was a complete understanding between France and England, especially regarding the guarantees of her security demanded by France against Germany. England, said the British premier, is even willing to make new sacrifices to maintain the peace and safety of France.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN, Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, April 4.—President Wilson was unable to take part in the peace conference discussions today because of a bad cold which compelled him to take to his bed.

The President has been suffering from a cold intermittently ever since his second arrival in France. Furthermore his vitality was taxed by the enormous amount of work which he found accumulated in Washington and after his return to Paris.

Hawker to Attempt Flight Over Ocean Late Next Week

St. John's, N. P., April 4.—If meteorological reports are favorable, Pilot Harry Hawker will make his attempt to fly across the Atlantic late next week, according to an announcement made here today.

The work of setting up the Solovitch plane, in which Hawker is to make his attempt, with Mackenzie Grieve, his navigator, was started today at the aviation field here.

Aviator Morgan, who will attempt a flight with his Martin plane, is reported to be on his way to St. John's, on the steamer Sackville. He is expected to start about April 15.

NORTH END BILL IS DEFEATED IN THE HOUSE

Representative Martin Hayes of Brighton, speaking in the House today against the Senate bill for improvement in the North End, characterized the appropriation of $3,000,000 covering such expenditures as the sickliest piece of graft which the Legislature ever received. On a vote the bill was killed. Hayes said the bill covered twenty-two parcels of land which "anonymous patriots" proposed to unload on the city. The scheme, he said, had gone through the Senate and received a unanimous vote in committee.

What do taxpayers of the city have to do with the bill? he asked. The bill covered twenty-two parcels of land which "anonymous patriots" proposed to unload on the city. The scheme, he said, had gone through the Senate and received a unanimous vote in committee.

Several others spoke in favor of and against the bill. Representative Hudson of Waltham, in charge of the bill, said the only man who opposed the bill was "The Mayor of Chinatown, ex-Representative" Donohue, who appeared in committee.

HISTORY of the YANKEE DIVISION

by HARRY A. BENWELL

YANKEES WON FIRST SKIRMISH WITH GERMANS IN 'NO MAN'S LAND'

This is the sixth instalment of the "History of the Yankee Division" which began in the Sunday Advertiser-American on March 30. Major General Edwards paid a tribute to the division in the first instalment. The story of the organization and debarkation of the division followed. Then came the tale of the sufferings endured in the training area and General Edwards' insistence that the entire division go into action at one time, which was told in Chapter IV.

CHAPTER V.

First U. S. Divisional Shot in War

The guns of Battery A of the 101st Field Artillery went into action in the afternoon of February 5th. At 3:45 o'clock one of the 75a fired the first shot of a full American division, much to the delight of the peppy Colonel Sherburne, commanding the regiment. The shell case was later sent home, and placed in the Massachusetts State Capitol. The 101st Infantry went through to front line positions that night and was the first National Guard outfit, representing a full division, to get into action.

It was a new and somewhat nerve-wracking experience for these New England boys. Piling one by one into the line in the darkness of night, with French soldiers guiding them, they took their places. It was a strange feeling to realize that but a short distance away were men who would gladly murder them at the first opportunity. All that night sentinels peered anxiously into the blackness of No Man's Land. Many times an ever-worried lad believed that he saw large bodies of the enemy advancing toward the American lines.

The division was under the French in all matters except supply, evacuation and ammunition. The troops were scattered over forty kilometres of front and the supply of various units daily with subsistence and forage, keeping them properly equipped and uniformed, was a problem which no other division had ever gone through or will have to in the future. The roads were in frightful condition and it was a tremendous task to get supplies over them. "The various regiments went into different sectors," said General Edwards, "and when the green battalions went in, it became the duty of the German to identify them. In other words, you get an order for identification. That means that you have to send out a raiding party and you have to get some of the enemy and make them talk, telling what outfit they belong to and identifying the division, the battalion and the regiment."

Germans "Feel Out" Yankee Units

"This was called a quiet sector at the time. The French, by a brilliant operation, had taken the Chemin des Dames in October of the previous year. They did not have many troops and they sat down and occupied it. The system of defence was a series of camps de combat, with trenches about to the knee and with target machine guns defending. The German immediately felt out every one of my regiments. The 104th went into this difficult place and the German put down a heavy barrage in the rear of these groups of twenty or forty men with machine guns. The idea was to prevent reserves from coming up, and in the morning rush in and gobble up the men, take them home and say: 'Here are some of these queer Americans we have heard about.'"

"The barrage was put down on those 'green' men, and they did not even lie down. They crouched in their holes, with high explosives rattling on their helmets and killing several, and when the barrage was lifted, jumped up and made a lot of prisoners of the Germans."

The Chemin des Dames sector was considered quiet by the French, but immediately after the arrival of the New Englanders the German gave them a baptism of fire. It was here that the first member of the division to become a victim of the enemy met his death from shell fire. He was Corporal John J. Crowley of the signal platoon of the 101st Infantry.

During their six weeks in the Chemin des Dames sector, where previously some of the most sanguinary actions of the war had taken place, the New Englanders participated in and repulsed a number of raids, but there were no really large engagements. They also received a trying out under fire which proved them to be of the best soldier material and won warm words of praise from their French comrades.

General Edwards made a custom of always preceding his troops into a new sector and making a personal reconnaissance of the front to be taken over. As a result of the knowledge thus acquired, he three times countermanded written orders when emergencies arose, and by means of verbal directions saved his troops from unnecessary casualties.

Despite the fact that his action was opposed by the higher command, the sturdy old fighter persisted, and the results always justified him. In this way he saved the lives of many of his men and demonstrated the fact that practical experience is superior to theory.

In this sector the New England troops were sandwiched in between French outfits, a battalion of French, then a battalion of Americans, and so on. Raiding parties were made up of men from both armies, with usually a French officer or non-commissioned officer acting as mentor and guide.

On St. Valentine's day, after the Yankees had been in action for a week, they got their really first opportunity to take part in a night patrol. An order came through calling for a patrol made up of twenty Americans and twenty French, the whole party to be under the command of a French officer. The 104th Infantry, which was holding this particular spot with a French regiment, was asked for volunteers, and the whole outfit volunteered to a man. However, only twenty could be taken, and Lieutenant James W. Brown was selected to lead them.

As the word of command from the French officer, the party wriggled out of their "fox-holes" and started across No Man's Land. They had orders to go as far as the German wire and if possible to secure prisoners.

The German entanglements were reached without incident, and the men turned back after looking over work which had recently been completed by the enemy. Part way back moving figures were discovered between the party and their own lines. Lieutenant Brown at once ordered his men to lie down flat, and opened fire. The Germans, for so they turned out to be, replied. The Americans were armed with automatic pistols and rifles and their French comrades with rifles.

After about half an hour the German fire died down, and the Americans and French started slowly forward. They found a wounded German and took him to their own lines, where he died a short time later.

In the meantime, Sergeant John L. Latzig, who was out on the flank of his patrol in company with a French poilu, saw a German crawling away into the darkness. Latzig jumped on the German, and a rough and tumble battle took place, in which the American was the victor.

When the reconnoitring patrol reached its own lines, the roll was called and eight men together with Sergeant Latzig were missing. Although it was almost daylight, Lieutenant Brown went out again to search for the missing men. German machine guns opened up on him, but by diving from one shellhole to another he managed to avoid being hit. After some time he desisted a moving party which turned out to be the men he was seeking.

It transpired that Latzig had started his prisoner for what he believed to be the American lines. A flare showed that he was heading in the wrong direction. It also showed him a number of Americans crouching in a nearby shellhole. The sergeant took command, and was on his way in when the lieutenant met him. For this act both the lieutenant and sergeant were awarded the coveted Croix de Guerre.

Germans Come Over on a Raid

A few nights later the Germans came over in a raid directed against a company of this same regiment which had come in for the first of its days in the front line. Prior to the raid the German artillery bombarded the American lines, the fire waxing hotter until at 10 o'clock it was intense. In a short time it ceased, and a barrage was laid down which the German raiders followed. By the bright light of the moon the Germans were seen by the Americans passing through a wood.

When they reached open ground, however, the enemy faltered and then broke. The "green" Americans, following a terrific bombardment, were waiting and poured in a fire which demoralized the Germans.

These two incidents, which were typical of the Yankee Division, caused French commanders to shower General Edwards with compliments.

The general's headquarters at this time were at Courtelles, some distance behind the lines, but he refused to stay in them. Accompanied usually by his aide, Captain "Nat" Sippkins, or by Major Hyatt, he visited the front daily, again and again subjecting himself to the enemy fire. At all times he kept his finger on the divisional pulse; dropping into regimental "P. Cs." or posts of command, visiting dressing stations, and stopping now and then for a few words of praise and encouragement for the men. On two occasions horses were shot by enemy aviators in front of him. In describing this later he said:

"We were being bombed every night, and nothing on earth gets on your nerves like bombing. The enemy had airplane superiority, and when I went riding on my horse, as I did with my staff officer, we always agreed whenever an airplane came around—and we were a little doubtful whether it had a German cross or a French circle on the fuselage—that we would take cover. He'd ride one way and I another, and then we would tumble from our mounts and roll into the woods. We had to do that three times. The aviators would come over, see someone on a good-looking horse, and turn loose with their machine guns. I had two horses killed right in front of me."

They also attacked our balloons and it was a common sight to see French observers jumping with parachutes and some diving down, depending upon the wind to take them over the line."

Wanted to Be Muddier Than General

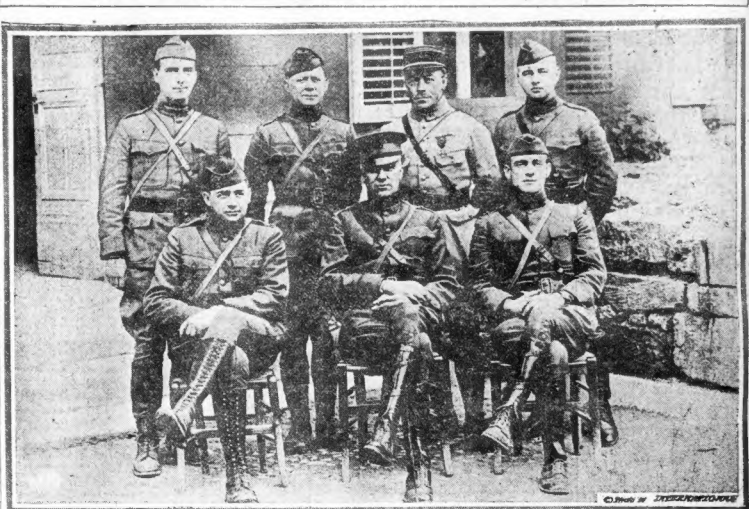

An interesting story is told exemplifying the attitude of the men toward General Edwards, the general made an inspection one day at Chemin des Dames, the general made an inspection of the line. After he had gone, Major Hammond of the 104th Infantry decided he would go through and see what had happened.

In the trenches he came upon a spectacle which astounded him. A "buck" private was standing, first on one foot and then on the other, vigorously wiping the mud from his shoes on to his breeches and coat.

An irate sergeant who had also witnessed the performance, suddenly rushed up and profanely demanded to know what the private was doing. "Are you crazy?" he asked. "No," replied the "doughboy" solemnly, "but I'm damned if I'll let any general come through here with more mud on him than I've got on me."

In this sector the 104th was holding the line at Bois Quincy, about February 9 or 10, when on the third night the German attacked. The 104th Infantry was the only American unit in this place, nothing but fox-holes and heaps of mud at the outer edges of the woods. The kitchens in the woods were on top of the ground instead of underneath it, while officers and men lived in shacks. The German put down an intense barrage and then the raiding troops came over. They were repulsed with losses, while the Yankees had only one wounded. The following day Captain Hyatt went through the woods and found that the ground was literally peppered with holes, and the whole place torn up. He never could understand how the New Englanders had escaped without more casualties.

Late in February a big raid was started by picked German troops, who were brought to the front in covered caissons, or trucks. Following a violent barrage, which began at 9 o'clock of an extremely dark night, and which lasted half an hour, the Germans crossed the canal which divided the lines at this part of the front. The enemy split into three parties.

"One made a feint attack to draw the fire of the Americans and French, a second crept noiselessly straight across No Man's Land, while the third swung to the right and attempted a flanking movement on the outposts. The watchful Yankees soon discovered what was taking place, and with a withering machine gun fire broke up the attack. The picked German troops were unable to stand the intense fire, and retreated."

Prior to the beginning of this attack, an American wiring party, consisting of thirty-two men, under the command of Lieutenant Ralph Bishop of the 101st Infantry, with a French sergeant as guide, had gone out into No Man's Land. Loaded with rolls of barbed wire and stakes, they were busily engaged when the barrage began to drop around them. Lieutenant Bishop ran along the line, getting his men into small groups and ordering them into shell holes. Then he made his way through both German and American barbed wire, to his own lines and reported to the French officer who was in charge of the wire laying. Again the young officer passed through the rain of shells, and ordered back all the men he could find. The central party of German raiders had in the meantime passed the Americans without seeing them.

Heroic Act by Lieut. Bishop.

Lieutenant Bishop did not find all his men, and was himself forced to join the last group who shot their way back. On the way Bishop saw a badly wounded man. Taking two of his party he went out, found a stretcher, got the wounded man, and carried him to a dressing station.

When the lieutenant left his own lines to go back through the barrage the third time, Sergeant Eric S. Olsen and Corporal Earl H. Sanderson went back after him. All three were recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross.

By the time the Yankees left this sector, a large number had been recommended for Distinguished Service Crosses and Medals, and a respectable sized group had been awarded the French War Cross.

During this time the division had suffered very few casualties, but twelve men had been sent to the hospital with gas poisoning. This was a remarkable testimonial to the efficiency and morale of the men, a morale which had been built up by General Edwards without the long months of training considered so necessary by the majority of regular army officers.

There had already been many changes in the divisional personnel. Officers had been relieved and transferred, and other officers had been made from the ranks. Captain Hyatt was succeeded in G-2 by Major MacCall, a stranger to the division, who had been sent over from the States and had no experience. In January Col. Shelton had been relieved as chief of staff, and succeeded by Colonel Dowell, while Major Malack, the G-3 of the division, was later succeeded by Colonel Krueger.

These changes were made by General Headquarters at Chateau, and the policy was continued to the end. They constituted a great annoyance to General Edwards, who would no sooner get a man on whom he relied in a position, when an inexperienced regular army officer would be sent to relieve him. In some cases, such an officer might have attended the Staff College for a time, and having absorbed a quantity of theories was considered to be perfectly capable of taking over the work.

One other incident at Chemin des Dames is worthy of being recorded, as it exemplified the spirit of self-sacrifice and desire to "play the game" every member of the division.

During a German attack grenades were being handed to a squad of bombers by Corporal Homer J. Wheaton of the 101st Infantry, a former Worcester newspaperman. These bombs were prepared by hitting the detonators, after which the bomber heaved it with a stiff arm motion at the enemy. After the detonator is set off it is but five seconds until the bomb explodes. Wheaton had an arm full of bombs, which he was handing out, when one of them dropped to the ground and struck on the detonator. The corporal saw it fall, and in a flash realized that an explosion would kill a large number of his own comrades. Without the slightest hesitation, he gently deposited the bombs he held in his arms, and, leaping forward, smothered the grenade on the ground with his body. The explosion took place, but Wheaton was the only man killed.

'GOLDEN RULE' IS ROCKEFELLER'S UNREST CURE

John D. Jr., Says Bolshevism Will Not Reach Serious Proportions in U. S.

By International News Service.
New Haven, Ct., April 4.—Bolshevism is not likely to take serious proportions in the United States when the wage earners know that capital is treating labor fairly," declares John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a long interview published in the Yale Daily News today.

Mr. Rockefeller says that the only hope of industrial peace in this country is the practice of the Golden Rule by capital and labor.

In telling how personal touch leads men to regard each other in a different light, Mr. Rockefeller relates an incident which followed an address he made at a Y. M. C. A. camp in France, where one of them asked the secretary in charge which was Mr. Rockefeller. The secretary pointed me out. The man walked slowly around the group, then looked, stopped and listened and said: "Stop your fooling that's all."

The secretary assured him it was not and he exclaimed: "Why that's a man, that's no devil."

Mr. Rockefeller said that years ago, heads of industrial plants were close to their workers and the spirit of brotherhood prevailed. Under modern conditions contact between owners and employees is practically impossible.

Offer, therefore, he says, the earthenware, the strike and the lockout. These conclusions are false, he says.

"Labor and capital are partners, both must attain the fullest measure of success unless the other does also, and the absence of contact between near normal as possible by either side of personal relations between the owners represented by the officers and employees represented by certain of their fellow workers whom they have chosen."

"When the principle adopted by both parties is 'as you would be done by' there will be no industrial unrest, no industrial problems."

GIRL SLASHER IS HUNTED IN WOODS

Search by posse, however, fails to disclose definite trace of assailant.

Lawrence, April 4.—Victor Demara, Lawrence business man, who pretty twenty-one-year-old Eva Trahan, says attempted her life by brutally assaulting her by striking her on the head with a hammer and cutting her throat with a pocket-knife, is thought to be hiding in the dense forest woods.

A posse assisted the police in a thorough search of the woods, but no trace of Demara has been found. The girl is on the danger list at the hospital and may die, it is said.

RELIEVE DEMARA'S ALIVE.

The police believe Demara is still alive despite the fact that he took his revolver with him. Nearly all his clothing, including his overcoat, are at his home, No. 150 Water street, where the attack upon Miss Trahan was made.

Miss Isabel Duffen, the girl's cousin, stayed at the Lawrence General Hospital. In a brief period of consciousness she said her assailant was in which Demara in a jealous rage broke through the door of her room and beat her over the head with a hammer.

WAS HE MARRIED SOON.

She spoke of entertaining her fiancé, Joseph Roberts, who recently returned from service in France. The attentions of Demara, whose wife died in the recent influenza epidemic, kept her out of her room by the girl, although she says she did not marry him.

She said several girls were in the store which adjacents the house where the assault was committed and Demara talked with them for two hours before she retired.

Private Roberts stayed at the hospital while she was operated on. He and Miss Trahan had planned to be married.

FORCED GIRL'S ROOM.

Demara waited until Miss Trahan was asleep, the police say. He went up stairs to his room as usual, but soon reappeared, forcing the door of the girl's room across the hall.

When Demara struck her, she told her girl cousin, who was stunned for a moment, but attempting to raise she was dragged to the door from the bed. He then attempted to cut her throat, she alleges. She lay bleeding near the point of death, when she was found in the hallway some time later.

We know there are some parents who have not as yet enjoyed the many advantages gained by purchasing their boy's wearables on our Great Juvenile Floor. To these people we wish to offer a special opportunity to get acquainted.

KEEP TROOPS IN IRELAND, URGES SECRETARY

By EARLE C. REEVES.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, April 4.—Following a strenuous debate in the House of Commons upon the Irish situation, during which frequent allusions were made to sentiments held in the United States, Sir MacPherson made his maiden speech as chief secretary for Ireland, calling upon the government to continue the military occupation of Ireland for the suppression of "most cruel outrages and lawlessness."

Mr. MacPherson expressed belief that self-determination for Ireland was impossible under the Sinn Féin organization. The chief secretary backed up the proposals of Sir Edward Carson, the Chief Minister of Ulster, for better housing conditions and a better system of education in Ireland, and announced that plans were under way to make Ireland one of the most prosperous countries in the world, but it must be freed from terrorism and the menace of Sinn Féinism.

Mr. MacPherson said he believed Sinn Féinism would strike both industry and self-development. Answering the declaration of T. P. O'Connor that England's refusal to recognize Ireland was estranging America, Robert John Lynd, a member of Commons from Belfast, said that the vast majority of Americans were uninterested in Ireland except when election time forced some factions to become "house rulers."

Joseph Devlin got a laugh when he referred to Sir Edward Carson as "the sleepy Rip Van Winkle of British politics" after Sir Edward spoke at length in behalf of better educational and housing methods for Ireland and declared that the "real north" of Ireland had turned out her citizenship to help England.

Mr. Devlin held that the partition of Ulster might be accepted as an isolated solution of the Irish problem, but the convention solution was the only real one.

WILLIAMS PROFESSOR QUILTS AS BOND CHAIRMAN
Williamstown, April 4.—Professor Walter W. Williams of Williams College, who was chairman of the local Liberty Loan committee for the past four campaigns, has resigned his place owing to the fact that he will be out of town when the Victory Loan drive is held.

Kelly Likes Girls So Well He Weds Three of Them

Tacoma, Wash., April 4.—Private Francis W. Kelly, of Fred Waller Kelly, lives the girls. He admits it. But this admission has led to his wedding, and he now rests in jail with at least three girls claiming him as their own individual husband.

As Kelly was about to commit matrimony again without the intervening legal formalities of divorcing himself from his former alliances, it is alleged, he was seized in jail.

Kelly's alleged wives are widely reported. No. 1 is Douglas, Alaska, and No. 2 is Tacoma, Wash. Kelly No. 3 was considerably proved when she heard of her husband's change of heart and intention to wed a Seattle girl. Both will be witnesses at a court-martial at Camp Lewis soon.

R. I. 'DRYS' DUE FOR JOLT, SAY POLITICIANS
Providence, April 4.—Will the Rhode Island General Assembly pass legislation regarding the sale of a per cent beer? This is the big question hereabouts with advocates of such legislation being heard from all over the State. Many members of the State Senate who predict that the Assembly will give the "dry" another jolt.

The legislation asked for is said to have the approval of the dominant political organization. Prohibitionists say the national government will take one of the question at the proper time.

Senators' sentiment of a tax on liquor, on public questions are heard arguing in favor of a per cent beer. They say their laws and they do not want to lose the revenue.

State Senator Frank P. Grinnell of Tiverton, who is credited with quelling the political ring there and causing the town to go dry, has many arguments in favor of a per cent beer. Tiverton is a hamlet near Fall River, where, it was charged, liquor dealers three away their keys. Senator Grinnell says:

"It is evident that Rhode Island does not want prohibition. The vote of the General Assembly about that. Some form of liquor will be drunk as long as men are able to talk and ask for it. I fear for the consequences if national prohibition is enforced."

RESCUE BABIES AND INVALID FROM FIRE

Eleven persons, including two babies and an invalid, were driven out by fire in the three-story building at No. 181 M street, South Boston, early today. The fire was confined to the basement, but the smoke filled the house.

The fire was discovered by Thomas Collins of 101 E. 2nd St. N., who was sleeping on the third floor in the apartment of relatives. He awoke his neighbors and gave the alarm.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Lane made their way through the smoke-filled hall carrying two infants, one two months old, the other eighteen months. Herbert Morse, occupying the apartment on the second floor, was in bed and was carried downstairs by members of his family.

The women and children were taken into the homes of neighbors. The property loss was $1,000. The police ascribe the fire to an overheated furnace.

Ever sink your teeth in one of those Touraine Chocolate Almond Bars Boy Howdy!!

The very recollection of that combination of crispy French chocolate and fresh toasted almonds is enough to make your mouth water.

A friend of mine says, "The trouble with the ordinary chocolate almond bar is that it keeps you waiting too long between almonds."

Touraine is different.

It is chock-full of almonds.

The chocolate is made the French way.

It is put up in a Yellow Package.

When you stop at the newsstand or the candy counter you see all those other makes of almond bars—all alike—all in "chocolate-colored" packages.

Do you know what grade of chocolate and how many almonds you are going to get if you buy one of those packages?

I've been in the chocolate business all my life. My friends kept telling me, "Duane, make almond bars, they're selling by the million."

All I said was "Wait."

My idea was this: if ever I make an almond bar I'll make it different.

Now the finest way to make a thing different is to make a thing better.

I won't make just another almond bar to sell.

I'll make it to eat and then I know it will sell.

So I went over to France to find out for myself the real French way of making that rich, crispy chocolate—the kind that doesn't make you thirsty—I found out all right.

But the hardest job I ever tackled, (it took over two years to turn the trick) was to perfect my automatic chocolate mixer, thermo, moulder and cooler, all-in-one.

That automatic machine is almost worth its weight in gold to you and to me.

With it, it costs me less money to put 50% more of the best grade of almonds in my Touraine Bars than it does the fellow who S-L-O-W-L-Y counts out every almond.

Touraine Almond Bars are the only ones made the real French way; they're the only ones chock-full of almonds; and they don't cost you one cent more.

The process belongs to me.

Today, I'm making 1,000,000 Touraine Bars every day, doesn't that speak for itself?

They are in Yellow Packages, not "chocolate-colored" ones.

Eat a Touraine sometime and you will be glad to remember

HARRY B. DUANE,
President,
The Touraine Company.

P.S.—The next installment will tell how I sent around the world to find an almond; how I made almond bars to eat; ate them myself; tried them on my friends, till I found just the right combination—French chocolate, chock-full of almonds.

FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN UNITED ON PEACE AIMS

Premier Lloyd George Denies Reports of Dissensions Between Paris Conferences.

The conference President was unable to rest for a few days in preparation for a resumption of his labors because of the demands made upon his time.

Throughout Thursday Mr. Wilson worked under pressure and against the advice of his personal physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson.

"Today his condition was still acute, although there was evidence that he was somewhat relieved."

Only his tremendous will-power enabled the President to get through with Thursday's program, but even that did not sustain him 12½ in the day when he was compelled to go to bed.

Dr. Grayson gives assurance that a complete rest will bring about the President's speedy recovery. It is impossible to say, however, when he will be able to resume his duties with the "Big Four."

Report Belgium Will Get Prior Payment of Half Bill From Germans

By JOHN T. FARMERSON, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, April 4.—The "Big Four" has granted Belgium a claim of priority payment from Germany, it was understood this afternoon, although there has been no official statement on the subject.

King Albert came to Paris from Brussels by airplane and for two days has been treating Belgium's claims, close advisers to President Wilson have been finding upon the basis of Albert's demands.

According to reports, Belgium is to get $200,000,000 from Germany. Thus when Albert returns he will have news that will flood his war-stricken country with the sunshine of prosperity.

In other respects the conference continues to furnish little more than guesses. Within the past six hours reports have been circulated that the "Big Four" had virtually agreed upon the disposition of the Saar Valley and the question of reparations, and then again that the "Big Four" had agreed upon nothing and were still in the conference to consider further their reports on these two problems.

"It was reported in one breath that the draft of the League of Nations was ready and in the next that it would not be ready for several days, none of the other reports and counter-reports are."

The League of Nations may have a chance some to satisfy Geneva, Lenin has proposed to make peace.

DEER AND DOGS AID TROOPS AT ARCHANGEL

By FLOYD McGRUFF, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, April 4.—(Reuter and Canadian dog teams are being used by the British medical corps in the Archangel and Murmansk fronts in Russia to assist the British and American soldiers fighting the Bolsheviks.)

First aid has been made very difficult on account of the intense cold, accompanied by snow and ice. This is explained in a report received by Colonel Shaw, director of the British medical services at Murmansk. Colonel Shaw reported that the sick are placed in snowshoes lined with felt and water bottles as directed as to allow the attention of the patient without exposure.

"Despite the extreme difficulties of the weather and the great distances to be traversed, it has been found possible to establish medical aid posts ten miles apart in farmhouses and tents," says Colonel Shaw.

"These posts are fully competent to deal with the sick and wounded until they can be removed by rail to the base hospital at Kola. Two hospital trains are now running on this line and are so popular, owing to the help they afford the Russians themselves, that they are apparently the only trains that pass through the country without obstruction. Both trains are very comfortable and well equipped and at times the patients stand as many as eight days making a single journey."

T. G. CURLEY OF MILFORD IS FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Milford, April 4.—Thomas G. Curley, fifty-five, wealthy retired Milford grocer, was found unconscious on the floor of his room in dilapidated block today by the janitor. He was taken to Milford hospital, where it was announced he was suffering from shock and may die. Curley lived alone and his janitor, William Brondick, became alarmed when he failed to appear yesterday and today. Summoned by Joseph McCreary, a barber in Gilson block, he forced an entrance.

WILSON FAVORS INDEPENDENCE FOR FILIPINOS

Washington, April 4.—President Wilson favors independence for the Philippine Islands. This assurance was conveyed today by Secretary Baker to a letter from the President to the members of the commission designated by the legislature of Manila to come to this country to voice their plea for self-determination.

In his letter, which was written March 3, the President expressed the hope that the Philippine mission would result in bringing about the desirable end set forth in the resolution of the legislature approving the sending of the commission to the United States.

"I have been deeply gratified with the constant support and encouragement received from the Filipino people and from the Philippine Legislature, in the trying period through which we are passing. The people of the United States have, with reason, expressing the feelings of the President and of himself and thought that he was expressing the sentiment of the entire people of the United States when he said that 'the time was substantially arrived when the people of the Philippine Islands should be allowed to enter the formal political life that binds them to the United States.'"

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

The President's letter, which was addressed to Secretary Baker, follows:

"Will you please express to the members of the commission representing the Philippine legislature my regrets that I shall be unable to see them personally on their arrival in Washington, as well as my hope that their mission will be a source of satisfaction to them, and that it will result in bringing about the desirable end set forth in the joint resolution of the legislature, approving the sending of the commission to the United States."

"I have been deeply gratified with the constant support and encouragement received from the Filipino people and from the Philippine Legislature, in the trying period through which we are passing. The people of the United States have, with reason, taken the deepest pride in the loyalty and support of the Filipino people."

TO AND WALKER PROPOSAL.

"Though unable to meet the commission, the Filipino people should be absent from my thoughts. No the least important labor of the conference which now requires my attention is that of making the pathway of the weaker people of the world, less perilous—a labor which should be, and doubtless is, of deep and vital interest to the Filipino people."

"I am sorry that I cannot look into the faces of the gentlemen of this mission from the Philippine Islands and tell them all that I have in mind and heart as I think of the patient labor with the end almost in sight, undertaken by the American and Filipino people for their permanent benefit. I know, however, that your sentiments are mine in this regard and that you will translate this to them my own feelings."

BAN SPEEDING BY JITNEY MEN AT DEVENS

Sergeant Leland Given Six Months for Refusing Order
by Court-Martial

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.
Camp, Devens, Apr. 4.—To stop fast driving by jitney men and others through the streets of this town, an order was issued today directing members of the provost guard and the military police to take into custody all who operate a machine more than fifteen miles an hour.

This precaution has been taken as a result of the large number of persons and outsiders who have been visiting the camp since its opening. It was made that the Yankee Division will be quartered here.

All jitney drivers who violate the rule will lose their camp license and will be prohibited from running a machine inside the limits of the camp during the stay of the men of the Yankee Division.

ROAD OFFICIALS ANGRY.
Railroad officials are incensed over the fact that the transportation of New England's horses from Boston to the camp cannot be done in a expeditious manner without interfering with the running time of regular passenger trains.

They say the men can be handled without any interference.

Frederick General Charles P. Cole of the 24th Division will move into his quarters in the afternoon of tomorrow night. After inspecting the place he left for Boston with his wife and Captain Frederick W. Leavelle, Secretary of the War Department.

He is in Montreal, Canada, was found guilty by a court-martial board of refusing to obey the order of a superior officer to take charge of a party of enlisted men and pilot them here from Flatbush barracks, N. Y., of bringing discredit upon the military service by conduct of conduct, and absconding himself without leave from the camp.

EVIL OF DRUGS.
He was sentenced to be reduced to the ranks, to be confined at hard labor for six months in the guard house and to forfeit two-thirds of that portion of his pay unaffected by allowances or deductions for insurance for a like period. The light sentence was given because the accused is an habitual user of drugs, according to the trial board.

Investigation dealing with the alleged larceny of supplies from the quarters of a machine gun company in the 26th Infantry disclosed the fact that the man detained is an enlisted man and not an officer.

Invalid Woman Wants Little Girl to Cheer Lonely Life

Is there any young girl in Boston who would like a good home? Mrs. C. A. Bennett of No. 79 Mechanic street, Pittsburg, writes to the editor of the American: "I am an invalid. I live in my home alone here in Pittsburg and I have all my hard work done for me by a woman who comes in. But I need little things done for me, such as a younger ten years old on nearly so. However, more important than the small service, is the company of a little girl, who will be able to cheer me and go out with me in my automobile. I will consider her as my own child."

"I am very lonely, Mr. Editor, and hope there is some little one in Boston who would like me and be willing to cheer and live with me and be my little girl."

"No I invite the child herself, or her parents, to come here and see me. Then they will know that I will treat whoever may come to me with love and care."

ARMY OF 100,000 REDS DISPERSED IN CAUCASUS

Victory of General Shkurov over Vladikavkaz Hard Blow to Bolsheviks

By Universal Service.
London, April 4.—(British Wireless).—In the Caucasus, General Shkurov's troops have accounted for almost the whole of a Bolshevik army of 100,000 men. It is announced in an official statement published today covering operations in the Caucasus. Vladikavkaz was captured

January 21 and with it fell enormous quantities of war material.
More than 20,000 soldiers of the Bolshevik army are said to have been captured, while many thousands were killed or wounded and the remains scattered. The lost included 12 army trains, 260 big guns, more than 200 machine guns, 9 sanitary trains, 100 locomotives and several thousand railway carriages and wagons.

GERMANS FEAR NAVAL ATTACK BY RUSSIA

By ALFRED G. ANDERSEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Georgetown, 1919, by International News Service, Berlin, April 4. Via London, April 4.—Germany is really in fear of Russia, especially as reports are coming in that Russia is assembling a big fleet at Kronstadt, according to an interview given to the International News Service today by Gustav Noske, Minister of War in the Ebert-Scheidtmann government.

Upon being asked whether he thought Germany would need a big navy after peace is signed, Noske replied:

"The size of our future navy depends upon the peace terms. I believe that Germany should be given equal power with the other nations that are signatories to the peace protocol. If the League of Nations becomes a reality a big navy will be unnecessary."

America and England are dictating the peace terms to the rest of the world, and I think it is not justifiable. It is a violation of the covenant's promises to Germany if the country is not allowed to have a navy.

America showed she was inconsistent by asserting the war for the extermination of wiping out militarism and then building up the biggest navy in the world.

At present Germany lacks money

Educated Worms Are Sought for Harvard Laboratories

It will soon be an open season on worms in Harvard biological laboratories for successors to One-eyed Pete and Cross-eyed Susan, the famous educated worms must be obtained.

Pete curled up his toes a short time before the war, while Susan passed away beyond the great world divide a few months ago. Both were considered marvels in their time, especially in ascertaining spots of safety in the electrical charge kangaroo's preparations for their benefit.

Where such knowing worms can be discovered again the Harvard savants are at a loss to know.

To build a navy. All of our fleet is now in English waters, and I do not know how much of it we shall ever see again."

Noske expressed the greatest fears of Russia, and declared he just heard that the Russians are assembling a big fleet at Kronstadt, but he did not attention to the fact that the Russians and Germans are still fighting in Constantinople.

If the Russian fleet is directed at us, we should have been allowed to retain about four cruisers for our protection in the Baltic, said the War Minister. "We laid down our arms because we thought our national rights would not be injured, but we are disappointed."

"It looks like England is going to be our policeman in the Baltic after peace is signed."

Noske only a few months ago was a non-commissioned officer.

U. S. COMPLETES BUYING PLANS FOR DEVENS

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Apr. 4.—Plans for the purchase of the twenty square miles of land which make up this commandment by the War Department are completed. Major Fred J. Wood of the engineer corps, whose home is in Brookline, has charge of the taking over of the reservation for the government. He looked over the land, inspected the maps, and consulted General Weathered, the civil engineer who is making the survey.

The deed will be one of the longest ever executed in this state for the transfer of property. It involves large and small parcels of land. However, the transfer of the property to the government will have to be done in Middlesex and Worcester counties. The land takes in three townships, Ayer, Shirley and Harvard.

The necessary detail work of establishing boundary lines, investigating old deeds and surveying the land has been executed in a manner that has won for the men engaged commendable praise from War Department officials.

Members of the Boston City Hospital unit were discharged today.

Thirty wounded New England men arrived today from Newport News and were sent to the Base Hospital for treatment.

A balky mule took offense when Mechanic Harry D. Hewitt of the 102d Infantry attempted to lead him from a car to a rest kiosk in France.

The Refinement

HERE is a model that emphasizes the fact that the House of Morse, in addition to being foremost among young men's tailors, originally made their pre-eminent reputation catering to the business man. The ability to fashion clothes possessing all the current style ideas, conservatively developed, is the reason why business men prefer Morse Clothes.

The garment here sketched is just one of a number of models appealing to the careful dresser. If wide appeal has any significance, The Refinement meets the requirements of men of affairs completely, for the demand for this model has been very large this season from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Clothes, Morse-Made, is but another way of describing substantial workmanship, never changing these sixty-six years.

CONTEST RIGHT TO ATLANTIC SERVICE FLAG

Quincy Mayor Asked to Settle Dispute Over Its Possession

The Atlantic community service flag has become a bone of contention between the Atlantic Improvement Association and the Atlantic Western Home Committee in the matter of its possession. It is alleged that the former organization has refused to surrender the flag to the latter. The flag was captured by a private citizen, and its possession is claimed by both organizations. The Atlantic Improvement Association claims that the flag was captured by one of its members, while the Atlantic Western Home Committee claims that it was captured by one of its members. The dispute has been referred to the Quincy Mayor for settlement.

War relics are all right in their place But There's No Place for War Relic Clothing

Don't think we're talking about something that doesn't exist, for it does. You see it everywhere in the ordinary makes of clothing sold by ordinary stores—war-time woollens made up in war-time styles, hastily camouflaged by a few last-minute changes.

The disguise is too thin to deceive the observing eye. No up-and-coming American wants such clothes, nor will take them if he knows where the really new is obtainable. We want you to know that in this Live Store the really new is obtainable.

Our immense surplus stocks, provided against a continuation of the war, have been disposed of and we start this season with all fresh, new goods in fresh new styles. We have no accumulations of war fabrics nor disguised war styles to work off.

It is especially fortunate for us and our customers that in this lightning-change period we are so closely allied with the liveliest, most wide-awake tailoring concern in the world—a house as famous for quality as for progressiveness. We refer to

The House of Kuppenheimer

Whose clothes are sold in Boston by this store exclusively

Here are styles that consist of something more than new names, on old models—styles that show the master touch of a genius—styles that measure up to the new ideas and ideals of the American man. And not the least of their attractions are the values they represent, for the Kennedy prices are closer to actual cost, and Kennedy values correspondingly greater than ever before. Kuppenheimer Suits start at $38 this season, but a big stock of other good makes enables us to quote a price range of $20 to $65.

Petition to the Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy to send Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Home with Six Months' Pay Sign this petition, get your friends to sign it, and forward it to the Boston American, 80 Summer St., Boston, Mass. To the Honorable Howard D. Baker, Secretary of War; To the Honorable Joseph Daniels, Secretary of the Navy.

The undersigned respectfully urge you to return to their homes as soon as possible the soldiers, sailors and marines who have accomplished so bravely every object America had in the war.

We urge, also, that you obtain the necessary authority to pay these men their military wages for six months or for some sufficient period after their discharge from the army until they can obtain useful and remunerative employment.

We urge this as an act of simple justice by a great nation to its heroes.

Print a sheet of paper on this for additional signatures.

THE STORE OF PROGRESS

THIS is the anniversary of the death of Danton, in 1794, on the guillotine. Danton, the strongest personality among the revolutionists, voted for the death of the King and strove in vain to establish a stable government. He was condemned by Robespierre on an absurd charge, and died defying his enemies.
